A New Bronze Tablet—Forlorn and Drunk—Good Fishing—A Drunken Spree—St. James' Whist Tonight—Life at the Beach—Personals.

Last week there was placed in the Congregational Church a bronze tablet to commemorate the renovation of the tower and spire of the church. The tablet is of the finest workmanship and from the base of the John Williams Company of New York. It is two feet square and rests on a back of polished old dark oak. The plate sets deep in a handsome border of chased work and rosettes are at each corner.
The letters are raised and highly polished. The tablet is placed inside the altar at the right of the main entrance. The inscription is as follows:

"The tower and spire of this church were renovated, 1908, by the contribution in loving remembrance of Medora Hubbell Saltus, by her husband, and of John W. Sterling and his wife, Catharine T. Sterling, by their children."

A forlorn looking man who said he had tuberculosis and had been in St.
Vincent's hospital for a number of months, and a smartly dressed woman, were up in the local court yesterday morning, charged with fre-quenting a disorderly house and intoxication. Both pleaded not guilty, and Mr. James Levery, who said he belonged in Fairfield, where he has a sister living, told his story. He admitted that he drank one glass of liquor, and as he had not partaken of the exciting and exhilarating beverage for six months, it was too much for him. It went both to his head and his feet and he lay down on a lounge until the demon should leave him.
He was under the "influence." He was drinking with Mr. B. B. B. B. B. B. B.
South avenue, who took him in out of pity, as he had no home, no money, and no where to go. The liquor was brought to the place by the woman in the case, who came from Bridgeport.
Mr. Levery was in the front room when the sheriff appeared and put him under arrest. The judge told the man to go to Fairfield as fast as he could get out of town, and offering his thanks he departed. As for the woman, she did not say why she went to the Beasley house, but she took some of the elixir of life, and also fell under the influence. She said she was a married woman and had a husband somewhere on Long Island, who would send her money. She remarked that she hoped she had never been in jail. She was fined $5 and costs and placed in charge of Sheriff Stagg until the charges were paid.

A large audience attended the union services at the Congregational church on Sunday afternoon to listen to a sermon by Rev. Mr. Farrar.
A good many townspeople and parties from Bridgeport, go to the breakwater for flat and black mud, and the sport is said to be very good.
White of Bridgeport was enjoying the excitement of catching the funny creatures last Saturday.

It has been decided by the ladies of Christ Church to give a food sale, bread, cake and pies, at the Town Hall, next Friday from 3 to 6 o'clock, p. m.

Some young men of local reputation, have gone on a voyage to Northport, Long Island. The vessel is called the "Ophelia" and it is reported that Fred Bewans is the captain and Alton Clinton the chief engineer.

The much talked of new candy store has thus far failed to materialize.
Really the town does not need one, since the best of confectionery can be had at the drug stores.

What appeared to be another drunkard, before the judge, was Judge Peck when two men named Michael Foley and John Glynn, got into a row with a man named Stephen Lewis, who lives on Main Street. The men claimed that they had run over Mr. Lewis' dog, and they called to ascertain the damages and settle. As they were under the influence of liquor, a mix-up and a fight followed. Mr. Glynn admitted that he had taken 20 glasses of liquor, but said he was not intoxicated. He thinks nothing of drinking 25 glasses.

Cullinan appeared for the defense, but Judge Peck found the men guilty of intoxication, breach of the peace and abusive language and they were fined $7 and costs for Glynn and $3 and costs for Foley. Foley promised to pay his bill of $18.89 and Glynn will have to pay $26.75.

WOOD FOR PAPER

PULP RAPIDLY
BEING EXHAUSTED

Washington, June 8.—Two hundred and fifty-one pulp mills in the United States used 3,346,106 cords of wood, and made 2,118,947 tons of pulp last year.
Spruce has always been the leading pulp wood, and it furnished sixty-four per cent. of the total quantity used.
The rapid development of the paper pulp industry in the last ten years has rendered the domestic supply of spruce insufficient to meet the demands upon it, and consequently importations from Canada have been heavy. In 1908 our pulp mills consumed nearly one and one-half million cords of domestic spruce, and over 670,000 cords of imported spruce, making the imports of spruce forty-five per cent. of the domestic supply.

Next to spruce, the most important pulp wood is hemlock; 668,176 cords of it were converted into pulp last year.
All the hemlock used was of domestic origin, and most of it was produced in the Lake States and Pennsylvania.
Although now used in less quantity than spruce and hemlock, poplar has long been a standard pulp wood. A total of 1,000,000 cords of poplar was imported, but by far the larger portion of the more than 300,000 cords used last year was cut from domestic timber. Spruce, hemlock and poplar made up ninety per cent. of the total quantity of pulp wood used. The remainder was supplied by many species, the most important of which were pine, cottonwood, and balsam.

The wood used by the pulp mills last year cost them a little more than $23-600,000, or an average of $3.32 per cord, against an average of $3.21 in 1907.
The most costly wood used was imported spruce, with an average value of $10.60 per cord. The average value of domestic spruce was $3.76 per cord and for poplar, $3.04 per cord. The cheapest wood which was used in large quantity was hemlock, at an average of $6.02 per cord. Owing to the uncertain business conditions the total consumption of pulp wood in 1908 was nearly 15 per cent. less than in 1907, but this did not prevent a considerable increase in the price of wood. The high price of wood is making the manufacture of pulp constantly more expensive, and is causing the mills to look out for cheaper raw material, and one of the most encouraging developments has been the increased use of slab waste and other sawmill waste. This drift in the industry is clearly indicated by the fact that 193,234 cords of mill waste were consumed in 1907, while 22,886 cords, an increase of thirty per cent., were used in 1908.

These statements are based upon a preliminary report of the consumption of pulp wood in the United States in 1908 just issued by the Bureau of the Census. The Bureau of the Census and the Forest Service co-operate in the collection of annual statistics of forest products, and this preliminary report will soon be followed by a bulletin, which will give detailed information upon the use of pulp wood in year in the various States, the cost per cord, the amount reduced by the mechanical, sulphite, and soda processes, and other facts of interest to the industry.

Lake by men in a motor boat when their rowboat upset.

Eckborn could not swim and sank immediately, while Johnson and Miller clung to the capsized craft until they were picked up. Eckborn leaves a family in New York.

TANK EXPLODES CAUSING PANIC

Bayonne, N. J., June 8.—A spark from a gasoline engine, butted into a 100 gallon tank of gasoline and the resulting explosion fatally injured Chief Chemist Joseph Hildert and his assistant, Charles C. Nier at the plant of the Pacific Coast Borax Company here. Hildert and Nier were in the laboratory which is close by, being separated from the plant by a concrete wall. Something went wrong in the engine room and the two men rushed from the laboratory just as the tank let go and they were blown 100 feet away.

The wall between the two rooms crumbled and the laboratory wrecked.
Many employees were panic-stricken for a time but were quieted when they saw that the plant was not destroyed.
